in it we should be wrapped up with the security and peace of the world community. E. G. Hansell, in demanding from the P.M. a full pronouncement on foreign policy, took the stand that the British Empire needs Canada; Canada needs the empire, but above all the world definitely needs the British Empire. Clarence Ellis, thought the time inopportune to talk foreign policy; that should come when we win the war, the world picture is clearer.

In the House of Commons the other day attended, on behalf of the weeklies, a press conference for General Henri Giraud. A memorable experience for me. The General spoke for 50 minutes, without notes. Tall, wearing a plain khaki uniform without decorations of any kind, he looked every inch the famous soldier who in two wars has escaped from the German prison camps. His chiselled granite jaw sets up an interesting face, close to a double for the late Lord Kitchener. He talks in slow, measured tones, without gesticulation; at times arms folded. He has piercing eyes which seem to take everything in without moving. While speaking, his face, stern, is in complete repose. Only twice did he appear animated; once when talking about the road from "Tunis to Berlin"; and again later in the question period when he asked what effect recognition would have for the National Liberation Committee. His face lit up and he smiled broadly, saying if that was a political question he knew nothing about politics. He was introduced to the press conference by Prime Minister King.

Good Rainfall Visits District

The Chinook district, was favoured with a heavy rainfall on Wednesday morning, when upwards of 1½ inches of rain fell, it was a steady rain with hardly any run off.

This (Thursday) morning another heavy shower drenched the district. These rains will be of great benefit to the late crops and will help in the filling of flax, wheat and other grains.

The gardens and pastures are improving already, which will help the farmers materially, as since the higher prices for cream shipments from Chinook district have greatly increased.

Tea, Coffee Rations To Remain Unchanged

Ottawa, July 28th (CP)—Rationing of tea and coffee in Canada must be continued on the present basis for "some time to come," because stock piles of those commodities are not sufficient to allow an increase, S. F. Mohan, Price Board administrator of tea, coffee, and spices, said Tuesday.

Mr. Mohan said his statement was issued in view of a "considerable" number of inquiries from the public and the trade, which were prompted by the recent announcement that coffee rationing in the U. S. was to be discontinued.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Wilson Celebrates 25th Anniversary

A very pleasant gathering of former friends and neighbors of Chinook met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Anderson, of Haynes, Alberta, to extend best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, of Chinook, on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

A sumptuous repast was enjoyed by all. Mr. Jas. Ferguson made a few fitting remarks recalling past gatherings on the prairie by those present.

A gift of silver was presented by little Jean Ferguson. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson replied suitably stating their pleasure at being among so many old friends.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, Chinook; Mr. and Mrs. J. Ferguson, Bright View; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Robertson, Camrose.

C.P.R. RUSHES BACON TO BRITAIN

Many millions of pounds of Canadian bacon for embattled Britain have been handled in Canadian Pacific Railway overhead refrigerator cars, similar to the one being loaded in this picture. It is revealed by H. J. Main, general superintendent of transportation, whose department directs these precious loads needed by fighting men and civilians. Particularly suited for continuing the cure of bacon in transit there are 300 of these cars of a type pioneered on the North American continent by the Canadian Pacific seven years ago. This constitutes the largest overhead-type refrigerator fleet in Canada and the

Autumn-Sown Grasses and Legumes

There are, no doubt, large areas in the prairie provinces which will be devoted to straight grain farming for many years to come. In most districts, however, a reasonable acreage of grass, or grass and alfalfa mixed, is good for the farmer and good for the farm.

A great many farmers have been discouraged because attempts to "get a catch" of grass have failed. Failure is commonly due to (a) sowing too deeply, (b) no protection from soil drifting and (c) sowing at the wrong time. In some years and some districts, the use of nurse crops has also caused disappointment.

Since the autumn is, alas, now very far away, and since autumn-sowing of grasses is becoming more and more popular, we think it wise to draw attention to some experimental work done at Saskatoon and published in "Scientific Agriculture" (Vol. 23, No. 7). The following statements are derived from the publication and the authors are Dr. W. J. White and Mr. W. H. Horner.

1. Sweet clover should not be sown in autumn.
2. Crested wheat grass, bromegrass, slender wheat grass and alfalfa may be sown in autumn.
- (a) Sowing is early enough to establish good-sized seedlings (late August to early September), or
- (b) Just before freeze-up, so that seeds don't germinate until spring.

3. Better results are obtained by sowing in stubble or weeds than on bare summerfallow. Since conditions vary from place to place, it is wise to consult the nearest experimental farm or the local agricultural representative.

CHAPTER TWO

The alarm clock rang at seven the next morning. Homer shut it off promptly then got out of his body building outfit. He opened the book at lesson seven and went to work with his elastic stretcher.

Ulysses was awake. He sat up on his elbow, turned up his little freckled face. "Hey, going to be the strongest man in the world? Going to be a giant?"

"Naah!" Homer exercised rhythmically. "I'm gonna be a track man. I'm gonna run the two twenty low hurdles today and try to win."

"Because it's the big race of Ithaca High?"

Ulysses nodded. That sounded reasonable. "All right, Homer, you run the twenty two, the twenty two, the twenty two."

He was still chanting the fascinating words as Mrs. Macaulay called them to breakfast. Homer's sister Bess was already at the table. So was Mary Arena. She was Marcus girl, the daughter of "home folks" who lived next door.

Homer didn't pay much attention to the girls' talk until they started that business of getting jobs and going to work. "What about that, Ma?" he demanded. Their getting ideas like that.

His mother laughed softly. "Why it's perfectly natural for a couple of girls to want to get out and flap their wings."

Homer stuffed some sausage in his mouth and frowned. "I thought I was going to do the work around here. I don't think Marcus would want the girls to..." He stopped indignantly. They weren't paying any attention to him, just whispering together. Huh! Silly girl talk. He jumped up and grabbed his cap. Couldn't he late to school today?

"Oh well. See you tonight when I get home, Ma."

The classroom was filled on the day of nine. Homer brushed past Helen Elliott and smiled faintly as he put a newly cut rose on her desk. Then he went across the room to his seat and sat there, adoring her brunettes beauty.

Miss Hicks started the day's session but Homer was off in his thoughts. A lot of things were bothering him. He knew he was in love with Helen. And he had that job. He was earning a living like a grown man. School didn't seem right now. It was for kids who didn't know about life.

He stiffened suddenly. That Hubert Ackley. The big brute was whispering to Helen, trying to cut in on him. And he had taken the rose and put it in his lapel. One of the pupils was giving a long dissertation to the class on the conquering Assyrians.

or foolishly. I am eager for my boys and girls to exert themselves to do good and to grow nobly. I want you to understand that each of you will begin to be real men and truly human when, in spite of your differences with one another you still respect one another. That is what it means to be civilized."

A hush fell over the room after she had spoken.

It was then Mr. Benton, the coach, strode in. Benton was furious as he demanded that Miss Hicks release Ackley for the track meet. In lush phrases he told her of Ackley's background, of his courtesy, his obedient character, his fine upbringing. It was all a little sickening because everybody knew that Benton was always licking the boots of the well-to-do.

"Come on Ackley," he wound up. "I'm giving you permission to leave with me. Come on."

Ackley started a startled, sideling look at Miss Hicks. Her sister Homer stood there and did a slow burn. "Well, Miss Hicks, you saw that. Is that democratic? Is that being civilized?"

He didn't know it but Miss Hicks, as noble as the words she preached was weeping in her heart. "It certainly isn't," she flared. She blew her nose. "And that Mr. Benton doesn't know the first thing about sportsmanship." She was speaking almost to herself. "I've seen good men pushed aside by his kind who the kind who go through life, lying and cheating, toadying to those whom they think are their superiors and crowding out men who are above such treachery." Her eyes went straight to Homer. "The twenty two low hurdles indeed. Huh! You go out on that field Homer Macaulay and go out to win."

Her whistle. Miss Hicks was so unexpected. "Gee, I didn't know that teachers are human beings like anybody else. It sounded so tepid compared to his feelings. He threw in for good measure. "And better too."

Her smile was misty. "Homer when you leave this school, I wonder after you have forgotten me I shall be watching for you in the world."

At the athletic field, three of the low hurdles indeed. Ackley was looking in the lanes. The starter was ready at his watch, his pistol in readiness.

A low murmur went up from the spectators as they saw Homer. Homer giggled inside himself as he caught a glimpse of Benton looking mad as a horned toad. Then Ackley saw him and the heat he let out was music to Homer's ears.

"How did you get here?" he demanded. "I was civilized," Homer retorted loquaciously.

"You haven't got a chance." "Oh, a fortune teller," Homer chirped. His eyes were on the track. "Well, Ackley, conditionally I'm going to win."

"Who says so?" "The starter's voice rang out. "On your marks. Get set!" There was the loud report of his pistol.

"They're off!" shouted the crowd and in that instant they all felt much in common as if they were members of one big cheering family.

Homer's running legs quaked. This wasn't just a race. It was the test of a strange upsurge of love he felt for funny looking Miss Hicks. And it was a way of proving that maybe a civilized man is the better man. And maybe it was to show Helen Elliott that she ought to concentrate on a champ like Homer Macaulay.

The outcome of this race means a lot to Homer. He must make good for Miss Hicks and Helen. And he must prove to himself that the decent way is the winning way. Don't miss Homer as loser or victor in the next chapter.

EXASPERATING MOMENTS

The merchant seaman was visiting at the home of a generous and patriotic woman who, despite her eagerness to help the war effort, wasn't too well versed about things. "And there was on the aft deck," said the seaman, "when all of a sudden I saw a torpedo plunging straight for me!"

"My goodness," replied the hostess, cheerfully, "I do hope it was one of ours."—Tit-Bits.

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE WRAPPED AIRTIGHT TO ENSURE POTENCY

Meat Roll-Up

Bread makes a wonderful meat extender and has many uses other than stuffing. The individual meat Roll-up pictured above uses bread to make a very little left over meat or fresh hamburger go a very long way.

The recipe is one that has been tested in the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture.

Meat Roll-Up (1 coupon—6 servings)

1 tsp. fat
2 tsp. chopped onion
1 lb. hamburger
2 tsp. chili sauce or ketchup
Salt, pepper and seasonings to taste

Reheated gravy or canned tomatoes to moisten

Loaf fresh bread
Steak onion in melted fat—add hamburger and cook, stirring well with a fork to keep meat separate. Add other ingredients, using just enough gravy or canned tomatoes to make the mixture easy to spread.

6 thin slices lengthwise from the loaf of fresh bread; trim crusts. Spread each slice with meat mixture and roll. Brush rolls with melted dripping. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375°, until golden brown and crisp—about 20 minutes.

Serve with gravy or tomato juice. Left over cooked meat may be used instead of hamburger, omitting fat and mixing meat and other ingredients without cooking.

A Glorious Race

People of Greece Have Fought On Against Terrific Odds

Beverly Baxter, in Maclean's, says: Greece! The story of a glorious race of people fainting in the streets, holding on to life though their hearts are so weak with hunger that the blood can hardly be pumped into their impoverished veins. When Italy had sent them an ultimatum France was prostrate and Britain stood alone against the powers of darkness. Yet Greece, steeped in the glory of her ancient history, said, "We shall fight."

And when Italy was thrashed almost to a standstill Germany too sent an ultimatum and Greece said, "We fight on while one Greek can hold a sword."

Our own story is glorious enough but what tribute can words pay to a little nation which had no chance of victory but could only take the arrows into its breast.

Youth Organizations

The Mobilization Of The Youthful Population Will Help In Peace-time For some time now, Britain's youth has been mobilized for war, and for the Peace that follows. At the beginning of the war, the Old Country was faced with a youthful population whose work had to be directed into the proper channels. Fathers were absent in the Armed Forces and mothers were working in the munitions factories. Neither could properly look after their children.

Faced with this problem Britain, therefore, set up a Committee known as the National Youth Committee. Its object was to look into the welfare of all the young people who were between the ages of fourteen and eighteen.

The first step taken was to set up Youth Committee branches in every locality.

In the proposals for the Youth Committees it was suggested that the boys and girls should not be interfered with, or pushed, or directed, in the accepted "school" manner. Although the branches were to start up new activities and train leaders, the young people were to be given an opportunity to act for themselves.

In the southern country of Suffolk, an organization arose which was known as the Youth Service Corps. This organization was begun, and its activities directed by the boys and girls themselves. They helped the farmers to weed their gardens and with the harvest; they gardened in the towns for their neighbors, delivered parcels for shop owners whose delivery boys had been called up, collected salvage materials of all kinds, and did a hundred and one other odd jobs. They even minded babies.

This service caught the imagination of the boys and girls and spread like wildfire. Within a few months there were service squads, following the general pattern of the original Suffolk Youth Service Corps in every county.

This concerted work of Britain's youth has proved a boon particularly to the nation's farmers. In the harvest time this work has partially filled the gaps in farming. In other activities the boys and girls have done equally well. They have collected over 120 million dollars in war savings in their School War Savings Groups.

No new youth organizations have been created in Canada during war-time but the old national societies, such as the Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. are each doing fine work and helping in the picture of total war. Organizations such as the Junior Red Cross, St. John Ambulance Association and others are concentrating almost one hundred per cent. on war efforts.

The Canadian Government is considering developing a similar scheme as the Youth Service Corps in England and recently a meeting was held in Ottawa chaired by Major-General L. R. LaFleche of the National War Service department to discuss harnessing the effort of youth between the ages of 11 and 18.

The Youth Service department of the Wartime Information Board is currently making a survey of the activities indulged in by Canadian youth and leaders of youth groups across the Dominion are reporting their activities to this department.

Nature Steps In

Has Provided Canada With Two New Openings To Sea

Nature has turned the tables on the map-makers who drew the Canada-Alaska boundary on the Alaskan panhandle, and has provided Canada with two openings to salt water that were only discovered recently.

Under the Alaska boundary dispute, in which a British-American commission drew up a settlement, the boundary was surveyed on a line not closer than 10 miles to the sea. This cut Canada out of possible harbors in northern B.C. The Alaskan panhandle contains harbors like Skagway and Juneau.

Recent investigations of defence conditions in the B.C.-Alaska area have demonstrated that in two inlets glaciers have melted back beyond the Canadian frontier a few miles inland. Word of this discovery was brought back to Ottawa by the permanent joint defence board which recently inspected Alaska defence works.

May Become Business

Raising Ships Likely To Become Larger Post-War Activity

The Normandie is shortly to be righted after more than a year on its side in New York's North River. In the Fifth of Forth, the British have lately completed a job of salvage on another ship which in its day was the largest afloat—the naval training craft, Caledonia, formerly the Majestic, of the Cunard-White Star fleet.

The account of its salvage is typical of stories, now not used or relegated to back pages to make room for tidings from the battle front, which in better times would command the fascinated attention of the world. The Majestic, a 56,000-ton ship went down several years ago in deep water after an outbreak of fire. Ordinarily it is a cargo which attracts the salvagers, but in this case it was 40,000 tons of precious steel needed for the war. The work was put in charge of Capt. C. G. Bonner, holder of the Victoria Cross for heroism in the Q-boat war on submarines in '17. Eighteen hundred ports, as well as hull openings, had to be sealed by divers before the great ship was pumped dry. This done, she was raised at the first attempt.

In the past, jewels and bullion and even ivory have been the lure. It may be that mining the sea and river bottoms for metal in the shape of sunken hulls will become a large postwar activity. The Russians in the one year of 1936 raised 53 vessels among them a British sub, sunk off Kronstadt in 1919. With improved salvage methods and an abundance of victims of the present wars to be worked on, an enterprise essentially romantic even in its quest for prosaic steel may become a business.—Detroit News.

Drumheller Crops Pounded By Hail

In one of the most disastrous hail storms in the Drumheller district thousands of acres of crop was wiped out during Friday night and early Saturday morning, while hundreds of windows were broken in addition to several hundred chickens being killed. Old timers did not choose to call it a hail storm but named it a fall of ice, since the stones were as large as an ordinary fist, leaving the farm land looking like ice breakup on a river.

The second fall of hail hit Drumheller district Saturday night.

Hail damage was reported from West Drumheller, East Drumheller, Verdant Valley and some other points at Munson, Gartley and Morrin which were hit early Saturday morning.

It is estimated that the entire course of the storm wiped out ten thousand acres of crop. It was revealed that the storm was about 70 miles in length and from two to four miles wide, believed to have started at Ghost Pine Creek, west and north of Drumheller, and extended as far as 15 miles east of Craigmyle.

Train crews reported that their trains were stalled since they could not gain traction through the ice despite the use of sand. One feature of the entire storm not a drop of rain fell with the hail.

P. J. Rock, prominent registered seed wheat grower in the Orkney district was hailed completely out. He lost a most valuable crop of first generation registered seed wheat in addition to registered oats, flax and other grain.

Jackie Butts had a narrow escape from what might have resulted in a very serious accident. He jumped on a tractor while in motion and fell off. A trailer from behind ran over his leg and foot. No bones were broken.

A WEEKLY EDITOR LOOKS AT Ottawa

Written specially for the weekly newspapers of Canada

By JIM GREENBLAT

To indicate increased demand on sticky weather, fared its way through Canadian supplies now, the Standards section informs us that sales of women's clothing increased by 98 per cent during first three months of 1943, as against the same period in 1939.

You asked about bicycles. I'm told present intention not to increase number manufactured. No change in number of models till end of war. We have developed a wartime model, expected to be able to continue its production as it represents the barest essential for cheap transportation. Is the statement.

No increase in butter ration, officials say. Your little wartime pal works for victory. Increased stock not abnormal, but consumption higher. Every time a coupon comes due they have to provide for 5,000,000 lbs. weekly. To build up reserve stocks for winter, as production last they need at least 70 million pounds.

As the British invasion news keeps, Parliament sitting in irritating hot, a penetrating discussion on foreign affairs. Mr. King, Mr. Graydon, and Mr. Goldwell had formally pledged Canada would not fall our fighting men. J. H. Blackmore, said he wanted no repatriation of the dead given soldiers after the last war.

Government was sharply guarded on the European refugee question. Canada will co-operate in recommendations of the Bermuda conference, the P.M. told the House; said little could be done now, shipping being such a vital factor. "... best way to save these helpless people is to win the war quickly." Our total immigration from April, 1933 to March, 1942 was 39,000 mostly refugees and thousands others "temporarily admitted."

West coast members like Mr. A. W. Neil, have been particularly anxious to see government to say what will be done with Japanese nationals after the war. There are, roughly 8,000, a third still subjects of Japan; another third naturalized; remainder born in Canada. Mr. King said the policy must depend upon the times and the situation prevailing, to be, maybe, related and co-ordinated with the same problem facing the United States.

Scheme for the creation of an International Exchange Union tabled in House. Canadian experts added new elements to scheme by British, American experts. No use trying to be technical about it, as few laymen understand. However, the proposal aims to "promote conditions in which member countries are free to carry out sound economic policies for the welfare of their own people and in which ... will not be forced to pursue policies which impoverish themselves or the world." Monetary unit proposed is 137 1/2 grains of fine gold.

There was a lump in my throat. Other morning watched national film board crew shoot scene for a documentary film. Way after wave of soldiers, army, C.F.A.C., Wrens, air-girls marching down the massive broad steps of the House of Commons toward the cameras; khaki, blue, white; six abreast, arms swinging, proud of themselves and the historic background. Canada's thrilling youth to uniform. You might see your own boy or girl in that film, some place, some day.

When the House is in committee discussing departmental estimates, a table is brought in on the floor immediately in front of the Minister at bat. Here sit deputies who quickly furnish him information on questions which are popped with astonishing regularity from the benches. Atmosphere is quite informal, but often very electric. How they pick those items to pieces, bit by bit. It looks to me like a Minister has to be a cross between a shadow boxer and professor of universal knowledge.

Home front quickies: Owing to short supply of allied nations, such as as alfalfa, red clover, alfalfa from 1943 Canadian crop slowly needed. Farmers asked to harvest, save as much as possible, sell at ceiling through usual channels ... formerly only bought in Britain, U.S.A., for the first time we now have delivered, Made-in-Canada, 50 special operating tables for us on naval vessels, a million dollar burn for drilling tools ... total value of contracts and commitments on Canadian and United Kingdom accounts by Munitions and Supply neared nine billion dollar mark end of June. Don't kid yourself, Canada is pulling its load.

Questioned to the House why the discount on Canadian funds as against U.S. dollars, finance minister Halsey in final exchange rates, he declared, would cause a vast amount of dislocation; some would benefit, others wouldn't. There would be no national gain by reducing the spread now. For instance if the west exported a lot of grain to the U.S. they would suffer by reason of the changing rates set. It was pointed out that to reach out the exchange rate while competing with currencies whose currency is depreciated below ours would be a disadvantage to us.

Howard Green, Vancouver C.C.F., proposed a foreign affairs committee like they have in Washington. E. B. Hanson frankly said the government's foreign policy negative. Here is a little back-bench comment: Listed to with respect, Mrs. Corn T. Caselman thought our foreign policy should be three-fold: Firstly, one to which the majority subscribe; secondly, being free and autonomous, it should be in close alliance with the Commonwealth and the U.S.A.
